Besides this, in one of the series there is a marked difference in the form of the sandal. The first of these series which we examined is to be seen emerging, as it were, from the southern side of the yard, and where the cliff is fifteen feet in height above the tracks. This series consists of twelve tracks, to which unmber four were subsequently added by tunneling into the rock. These tracks were evidently made in a layer of sediment of anese, ver the - r d is but that of the perhaps two inches in depth, for below average in in of five feet ten inches in this layer we find the compact sandstone. In each instance the mud had been raised by the pressure of the foot into a ridge which entirely surrounded it. This mud is only partially solidified, and is still tlakey and easily broken on exposure. Each of the imprines furnishes us with evidence, as we believe, that the feet of the one making the tracks were protected by sandals.

"In no slugle impression, perhaps, do we find conclusive evidence of this fact, but when we study them as a whole we find that that which is wanting in one is furnished by others which follow. In nearly all the toe portion of the sandal is well shown, it being as smooth as the work of a mason for the distance of two or three inches. Backward from the toe we generally find the impression of the outer portion of the sandal. When studied as a whole we can determine with a good deal of exactness the actual length and breadth of the saudal, which we tiad to be nineteen inches in leugth, eight inches at the ball of the foot, while the heel is six inches in breadth. In its outline it follows clearly the shape of the human foot. 'From the great toe outward there is a really graceful curve, which draws in toward the heel; while from the great toe inward the line is drawn toward the instep, and thence in an onward curve to the heel. In one series this curve is deeper, showing a slightly different form of sandal. The average length of the stride is two feet three inches. The distance between the feet or the straddle is eighteen inches.

"It seems very important to know if there were more footprints of the same series still running on into and under this rock face. To determine this fact Mr. Garrard, who was anxious to assist us in every way possible, immediately commenced a tunnel upon the line of the prints of the same series, if such existed. In this effort he was completely successful, bringing to view four other footprints, three of which were more perfect than those which had been prevlously exposed. One of the four, owing to a fault of the rock, was too obscure to be of value. Of this series we seeured twelve more or less perfect

"One marked feature is that in all of these tracks the toes turn well ontward, which is not as a rule the habit of the North American Indian. Within a few paees of the prints we have described is to be found another series of tracks made by an individual who was walking in deeper mud, which clung to and closed in upon the foot. Seven or eight such are to be seen in regular order, and then the track, like the one previously described, is lost in the ledge of the character o toward which the steps are tending. she secured a position as assistant teach-Three of these are somewhat smaller than the one described, while one has a sandal more curved than that of his fellows. These are lost in the ledge, where they may be followed by future explorations. These prints appear to be upon a floor a few inches lower than the one first described.

"Returning now to our first described tracks, we find at a distance of ten or twe.ve pa es other tracks, which we simpose to have been made by a mammoth. They are in regular order and e gnt in number, with an average stride of our feet four and a half inches. The to it is twenty-one inches in diameter. find no distinct traces of toes, but only a general outline of the foot.

" Besides the above described tracks there were tracks of some wading birds, as before mentioned. These did not seem to differ much in form and size from those of the same order now living. Several quite distinct tracks of deer are Dr. H. W. Harkness has read a paper found which in size and length of stride before the California Academy of Sci- much resemble those of a wolf. A Would-Be Charlotte Corday.

Recent events in France have again brought to the notice of the world that most marvelous woman of modern times, Louise Michel. While it is not wise to take her at the estimate of her friends, who look upon her as a veritable saint, nor of her enemies, who describe her as a human devil, it is safe to say that since the time of Charlotte Corday, who stabled the fiend Marat, there has been no woman in France who exerted the Influence over the masses that Louise Miehel does. There is no French orator to whose eloquenee the French people listen as eagerly as they do to hers, and when speaking, she has them completely under her control. By the Government she is more feared than Rochefort, or any other of the communist leaders.

This remarkable woman is now fortyseven years old, though she looks to be older. She was born in the Department of Marne, in the old Province of Champagne, noted for its sparkling wines. She was of lowly birth, her parents being, it is said, natives of Belglum, who crossed over into France and sought to improve their condition in the winegrowing regions. Louise's father dled when she was a little girl, and she was left to the tender care of her mother, who was mistress of general work at the chateau of a titled and illustrious family. Though ignorant, she was honest and industrious, and these principles she instilled into her fatherless daugh-

She also acquired an intense dislike to the church, in whose doctrines she had been piously instructed by her pious mother, and, like most of the Communists, is now a violent atheist.

Louise's revolutionary spirit grew and ences on the recent discovery of foot-prints in the sandstone of the yard of distance of twenty feet, where they also advocated the assassination of Napole in III., and went from one chib to another offering herself and her dagger for the purpose, but the offer was de-

H. J. Sheldon left his eamp at Cooper o'clock in the afternoon the burro, which had wandered ahead, came running back, apparently in great terror, ears and tail erect, eyes glaring, making that peculiar, mournful sound for which its species is noted, and refusing to be caught or comforted. Not being able to make out from the report of the confused burro just what had happened, Mr. Sheldon cocked his gun and advanced slowly and cantiously on the unknown enemy. Crawling along on his hands and knees for about a quarter of a mile he at length doubled a bend in the river, and there, stunding in full view in the meadow, and not more then 150 yards away, he saw a huge grizzly bear with three cubs, and, just beyond the bear, and in direct range with her, un animal that he at once recognized as the long sought for elk. Neither of the beasts was aware of his approach, so, quietly rising upon one knee and resting his rifle across the other, which is Mr. S's favorite position in shooting, he took deliberate aim. Bang went the gun, clk, and Mr. S. himself. The bullet had ly in two and, passing on through, had lodged in the heart of the elk; and the extraordinary tusk to which the rifle had been subjected produced such a violent recall that the hunter himself was stretched flat upon the ground. Says the Frankfort Yeoman: Hon. Jos. D. Pickett has been invited to take part in the interment ceremonies of John Howard Payne. Prof. Pickett was one of the last Americans to take the hand of Payne. They lunched together in Tunis a few weeks before the poet died, and at a time when Americans rarely visited that quarter of the world. Sametime ago we had from Prof. Pickett a graphic description of the events of this occasion, which were vivilly and pleasantiv impressed upon his memory. Among other things he noticed the gentleness with which Payne responded to the appeal of a stray dog that wamlered in for remnants of the lunch. One of the items of their bill of fare was some American gingerbrend which had been received by the poet from friends at home a few days before. Prof. Pickett remembers well a desire he had to ask Payne for a copy of Home, Sweet Home, in his handwriting, and his restraint from doing so by a reluctance to give him the trouble of writing. The lunch was in the open air at an old rain.

REST.

Rest will be sweet in the evening, when the day's long labor is done— Now, I must be up and doing, for my work 13

Peace may be dear to the veteran, grown weary of war's marms—
But now I'm longing for battle, the clush and the clang of arms l

Death by and by will be welcome, if I have been tuithful and true— Now, there is life to be fived, and I have so much to do!

Once, in the early morning, when the dews
were not yet dry,
In the misty summer morning, or ever the sun

As I looked along the road whereby I must And saw how great was the journey, how liercely the noon would glow,

Life felt too heavy a burden, and I so weary and worn, Weary before I had labored, and longing for night at morn.

Weary before I had inbored; but labor has bron ht me rest,
And now I am only enger to do my work with Whal right have I to be weary, when my work is scarce begin?

What right have I to be weary, while aught reunlins to be done?

I shail be weary at even, and rest will the sweeter be; Aud thesed will peace be to them that have won the victory l

But now is the time for battle-now I would strive with the lest: Now is the time for inbor; hereafter remaineth a rest.

· Fractions Horses.

The reason why there are so many fractions and musafe horses is so many fractions and unreliable men to train them. "Break" has heretofore been the term used to express the operation of training colts or horses for service. And it is truly expressive of what is done or attempted to be done. The rough, rude and ernel treatment an untrained colt is subjected to, is enough to break the temper and destroy the morals of the best natured instincts of a eall. To beat knowledge or morals into a boy or a colt has about played out. The first thing an inhuman wretch does who undertakes to train a colt, is to put a villainous blind bridle on him, one of the worst relies which has come flown to us from ignorance and barbarism. Then he is reined up so tight that his instinct teaches him to go backward instead of forward. The cheek DRAPING, and all the FINISHING PARTS of rein is so rigged as to throw out his nose and give his face a horizontal position like a camel's, so that he can neither see the ground when he steps, nor sideways on account of the blinds. LADIES Then the man who is called a horse jockey teaches the tender and naturally kind colt information with an infamons

The colt should be treated kindly in every step. By gentle handling and kindness of voice inspire his confidence. and he will soon reeignize his handler as a triend instead of an enemy. The human voice in kind tones or lirm command is a very potent agent in controlling and directing as intelligent an animal as a horse. When a horse is once Savings Fund Plan mands, the whip may arge him forward, and the rein may guide him, but the rude and insensible use of either only irritates instead of subdues his insubordination. No domestic animal more readily responds to the nower of kindness than the horse. It is no injury, but a great benefit to train colts early. When they once learn, nnlike JOS. F. BRODRICK. hoys, they never forget the lessons. If by rudeness and fractious treatment the colt learns bad tricks at this season Second Street, in life, they are too apt to stick to h m. and may erop out at any time after, when trouble frets or discourages him. So really nearly all bad tricks or vicious actions of horses are the natural results of the ill temper or rash actions of the person who trains them. Never allow your horse to see you out of temper, or to receive from you rash or ernel treatment. He neither deserves or is benefited by it.—lowa State Register.

The Dangers of Vegetarian Diet.

The wife of the celebrated Dr. Tanner has lately taken up her abode in France, having obtained a divorce from her eccentric husband under the following eireumstances: Dr. Tanner, it appears, is peculiarly addicted to extruord nary fancies: and, some time since, he thought that he had found out that the human character becomes modified according to the food taken by the indiv dual, and especially in relation to the vegetables consumed. Carrots, he avers, make people tidgety and sly; turn'ps produce extreme amiability; whilst a prolonged diet of French beans induces great irritability of temper. The earrying out of this theory ha. brought great trouble into Dr. Tanner's home. He made a heavy wager on the question with some friends, and experimented on Mrs. Tunner with French beans, giving her to eat about three poun is of this vegetable daily. It is not altogether to be wondered at it, after such a regimen, Mrs. Tanner became rather more irritable than was perhaps contemplated, and threw a jug ever, gained his bet; and, more thornughly convinced than ever of the trinth of his theory, put his wife on the timply the was before the French bean registive. This time, however, the result was not so strictly in accordance with the theory. Mrs. Tanner objected to the any longer a subject for these vegenand, what is more singular, obtained it.

tack as those affecting the throat and lungs : none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trilling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AVER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken heall cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my hugs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave noe up. I tried AVER'S CHEBEN PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I mu now 62 years old, hade and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. Iterrace Fairmeoffier."

Rocklugham, VL., July 15, 1882.

Croup. —A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last whoter my little boy, three years old, was taken lli with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of Aven's Cherry Pectoral, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequend doses, and to our delight in less hlan half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the Cherry Pectoral had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

Mrs. Emma Gedney."
